Making a difference at The Merton

Through this History journey we want to encourage the children to make a difference to their own lives and the lives of others. We will be looking closing at two inspiring nurses Mary Seacole and Florence Nightingale, we will be learning about the Crimean War and how it played a pivotal part in Mary's and Florence's life. The children will learn how the work of these women had an impact on nursing in the past and present day. Our aim is to maximise the potential of each individual's character by learning about real work examples from the NHS today and comparing these to the past and how medicine has improved. We want our children to learn about the characteristics of the nursing profession for example: perseverance, optimism, courage and kindness. During this topic we will sensitively discuss the racism Mary Seacole experienced in her life.

Making a difference at home

- Can you research the role of a nurse today? What do they do? Is there just one type of nurse?
