Making a difference at The Merton

At the Merton, we think that teaching children about their emotions and themselves is incredibly important. In this unit, we will teach children to value themselves and appreciate the impact that they have on those around them.

We will also learn strategies to use when things are not going as planned.

What I will learn...

- how my behavior affects others.
- How being included or excluded might make people feel.
- How to make others feel valued, cared for and welcome.
- To recognize the feeling of being motivated or unmotivated.
- That there are different roles in communities.
- What democracy is and how democracy is important in school.
- That groups need to work together to achieve.

Making a difference at home

At home, think about the different roles the different people have. How is each person's role important? Who helps with all of the jobs that need doing? Who is there to cheer people up when they are sad? How do you all help each other?
